Cognitive Behavioral Programming
This program is facilitated by PBPP trained staff called Assessment Sanctioning Community Resource Agents (ASCRA's). These agents conduct various groups throughout all 10 of the Board's districts that serve offenders who are on parole and probation.

Cognitive Life Skills is teaching an individual to think and react differently to everyday situations. It is designed to help an individual develop a personal plan to achieve their potential as a law abiding, contributing citizen of society.

Adult Anger Management is a program to help offenders begin to understand the different types of violence, why they move from anger to violence, and what they tell themselves about the use of violence.
