Governor Wolf Proclaims ‘Pretrial, Probation and Parole Supervision Week’

HARRISBURG – In recognition of the important contribution of probation officers and parole officers/agents in keeping the state’s communities safer, Governor Tom Wolf has proclaimed July 17-23 as “Pretrial, Probation and Parole Supervision Week” in Pennsylvania.

“Probation and parole officers are essential members of the law enforcement community – and their jobs are challenging and frequently dangerous,” said PA Probation and Parole Board Chairman Leo L. Dunn. “They risk their lives monitoring those under supervision, and collaborate with federal, state and local law enforcement agencies to investigate and combat crime and work to keep all Pennsylvanian’s safe by ensuring that the newly released parolees make successful transitions to productive lives in our communities.”

In proclaiming Pretrial, Probation and Parole Supervision Week, Governor Wolf acknowledged how these dedicated professionals work with the community to give parolees a second chance to be productive members of society.

Pennsylvania has more than 41,500 state parolees under supervision and over 243,760 parolees who are on county probation and under the supervision of the courts.

“Please take a moment and show your appreciation to all the state and county employees who ensure that Pennsylvania is one of the best in the nation in making our communities a safer place to live,” said Chairman Dunn.
